Red Sweater is a whimsical little application that allows you to customize the appearance of your menu bar icons. Requirements: OS X 10.8 or later version 0.3 Red Sweater Description: If you've ever found the icons in your Menu Bar difficult to distinguish and hardly ever use, then this is the application for you. With the Red Sweater application, you can change the colour of the icons and their size, with no impact on the functionality of the program. Red Sweater is split in two parts. The first contains the menu bar and icons, while the second is a panel which you can drag to any position of your choice on the screen. This allows you to overlay the application with something you might want to use and move the panel to the top or bottom of the screen. An additional panel can be accessed from the drop-down menu, which contains four tabs: Styles, Advanced, Debug and Plugins. Styles are the easiest to use, in which you have three options. You can choose the colour and size of the icon, as well as the type of icon you want to use. Advanced gives you access to additional colour options, including the possibility to change the colour of the menu bar. You can Change log: • Fixed the bug that it didn't work properly with wine. 1.5 Fix some minor bugs and an annoying issue. 1.4 Fixed the issue of the tool not running with wine, and added a pause to the interval a little for reducing the chance of it losing focus. 1.3 This version brings a few bug fixes and updates, mainly for the wine related part. 1.2 This version brings a few small bug fixes that had been brought to light, and also adds the ability to skip the pauses with the middle mouse button and a pause to the interval. 1.1 Fixed the bug that makes it not work with Ubuntu 16.04. 1.0 Initial release. Localization : At this point, the program is available in English, Portuguese, Japanese, and of course, ganted. The play button works for the mouse or track pad. It pauses for the length of the interval you enter, and then resumes at the interval you set. The pause for each interval is made through the option in the settings, but you can also select from the pauses menu. The shortcuts menu has the standard GNOME/Metacity menu, plus a window-like menu that works with multiple windows. You can either have a single

What's New In BlinkReminder?

BlinkReminder is an easy to use task reminder and rest timer for Windows. It puts a message on your desktop to remind you to blink every few seconds. You can also specify a 10- or 15-minute break time. You can lock the Desktop or turn off the mouse and keyboard. Unobtrusive Design: When you start BlinkReminder it will minimize to your System Tray. It will not annoy you with too much advertisement. The screen stays black or gray while the message is visible. Configurable Short, Medium or Long Breaks: You can change the break time from 1 second to 10 minutes. Start the break timer before the specified time and lock the screen. The break reminder will disappear after the break. Time is counted from the first click. Black Theme: The application is designed in a way that it looks good on all desktop themes. The message and rest timer are black on a black background. It is a nice addition when you look at your screen and know you need to take a break. Time Remaining: The application will display how long you have until you need to blink again. It shows both a time and a percentage. Preset Days: If you select the "Preset Days" checkbox, every day will be marked with a red dot. The app includes two alternatives. The first one is the "Blink Rate". We all know that blinking is good for our eyes. BlinkReminder sends a very short message on the screen when you blink in order to remind you to do so. It will run in the background and will display a message on your desktop. Your screen will be covered with a cross-hair image and you will not be able to click anything. If you want to change this behavior, just select the "Delay" checkbox and choose a new blink rate. You can set it between 0.5 to 3 seconds in 1/10-second increments. It is unlikely that you will ever need to change this value. Once you have selected a blink rate and pressed the "OK" button, BlinkReminder will restart. The other alternative is the "Breaks" and "Lock" checkboxes. Choose one of them and BlinkReminder will lock your screen at the selected time. The app includes a Rest timer, as well. This feature allows you to configure a break time between 10 and 15 minutes, with 1-second intervals in between. The
