The PC on the right has more graphics power than a PC with integrated graphics, but you have to pay more. A photo-editing computer with integrated graphics won't give you the same results as a dedicated graphics card. Using a dedicated graphics card will increase your editing time. A graphics card usually has a powerful GPU to perform the heavy mathematical calculations for professional graphics. A CPU performs basic functions, and often is not powerful enough for photo-editing. As a result, some Photoshop functions will be slow. If you want the best performance, a processor with an integrated graphics card is not recommended. A processor with an integrated graphics card is not recommended for graphic work unless you have a need for a very high resolution photo or are working with a video. Q: How do I (in postgres) truncate a table with millions of records? I have a table that has over 25 million records. If I "truncate" the table using its drop table command, the table takes about five minutes to drop. I have to kill the postgres process during this process. Is there a better way to clean up a very large table? Here's the command I'm using: truncate table mytable; A: If you really want to do that, you can do that: alter table mytable drop column mycol; But most likely you will want to know where your table is using something else before doing that. That way you don't do a DROP that may fail because you are deleting from a table that has foreign keys and triggers that rely on that table. /* * BioJava development code * * This code may be freely distributed and modified under the * terms of the GNU Lesser General Public Licence. What's New In?

I acknowledge I have extremely low vision and wear bifocals. I buy mostly new, and would like to purchase the following items which are inexpensive and useful, but could be too difficult for me to use. Can anyone recommend a reliable supplier of: -PROGRAMMABLE AMPLIFIERS (12, 15, 20-23, and 30-33 Hz) -BRAILLELLES (numeral or braille) -READERS OR SCANNERS FOR MAGAZINES OR THE NEWSPAPERS -TYPE TYPE TASK LIGHT - LEFT-HANDED -VOLUME CONTROLS (6, 8, 10, 12, 14) Thanks in advance for your suggestions. michelle November 17th 2011, 01:52 PM We have one at work with a touch screen that you can set to a certain program, and he can press the buttons for the function he needs to use, usually with a head tilt to indicate which way he needs it turned. It is a monitor that uses a projector to send images on a screen, and he works in fairly low light. colonelbeans November 20th 2011, 04:59 PM I think a scanner would be the best, no more arms or aching hands. I just received a wireless braille reader for my 4th birthday, but I had to get rid of my grandmother's PC since it was too dangerous, and I was told it was on the order list. Perhaps you could ask your eye dr for one? garciniacarmel November 30th 2011, 01:48 PM thanks for the replies - i think i've found a scanner... sounds great! can you recommend me which would be the best if the right side of my head has a lot of tremor? someone has suggested a motorized volume control, but i've searched many websites and they are super expensive. luckymouse December 1st 2011, 12:42 PM I'm really easy with hearing loss, so this is why I ask... I'm getting a hearing aid for my hearing loss and how I use the 'programmable' switch on the right side of my head scares the hell out of me! I think we'll need a bifocal montor with braille for my right ear. I went for a low vision
