Choosing a working environment Before you start working, you need to decide where you want to work. As an amateur, your tools of choice may be limited. But there are many features in Photoshop for which you have to have a fairly high-end working environment. When you work on a laptop, you need to consider how much space you need for your images and for your programs. You also have to consider what kind of power you want to use. No one likes being tethered to an electrical outlet all the time. If you decide to work on a desktop computer, you have to decide whether you want to buy or build your own. Here are some considerations for the type of computer you plan on using: • If you have a Mac, you need to look for a power supply that is compatible with Mac computers. Check out Chapter 3 for tips on finding the right power supply for your Mac. • If you plan on building your own, you can buy the computer system at an online electronics store or pick one up at an electronics or computer store. You can buy a desktop computer with an integrated operating system (OS) or opt for one without an OS, which is known as a blank or bare PC. If you plan on installing your own OS, visit www.apple.com/ca/support/mac/installation/installation.html for step-by-step instructions. • If you decide to buy a Mac

For the last two months, the eastern side of Aleppo has been under the control of the Islamic State (ISIS), Turkey and Saudi Arabia supported extremist force through a de-escalation zone plan that was brokered by Russia. The pro-democratic forces, supported by Russia, have been trying to liberate the Eastern part of the city of Aleppo since the beginning of the civil war in Syria. It is worth noting that more than 300,000 people have been killed in Syria since 2011. More than half of the Syrian cities had been liberated before April 2016 when the forces of Bashar al-Assad started consolidating its control of the city of Aleppo. The forces of the Syrian Democratic Forces (SDF) managed to liberate the city of Raqqa in October 2013 as well as Deir ez-Zor in January 2014. But the forces of the coalition (Kurdish People's Protection Units, YPG), Syrian Kurdish Democratic Union Party (PYD), allies, Russia and other international countries came to the aid of the Syrian Army in April 2016 and had stopped ISIS's advance and pushed them from most of the cities that they had captured. According to the press release, the forces of the Syrian Democratic Forces and the Russian army managed to liberate the areas of Sheikh Maqsoud, Adra and many other neighborhoods in the Eastern part of the city of Aleppo. During the first and second rounds of air bombardment by the Syrian forces, many districts that were controlled by ISIS were hit. According to the plan, the Eastern side of Aleppo will remain under the control of the Syrian Democratic Forces until a project of comprehensive security for the city is completed. This would mean the reestablishment of local councils that will be the local authorities in the liberated districts. "Aleppo is one of the oldest cities in the Middle East, and it had been a capital city of Syria for a long time. It is also the city of resistance, which lived through many military conflicts with Damascus and many other capitals of the Middle East and Europe. This city had a rich history and culture,” Salahaddin Suleiman, the leader of
