Field of the Invention The present invention relates to blood sample test devices, and more particularly to such devices as are used for obtaining a blood sample from a body cavity such as for the purpose of testing the blood for the presence of various antibodies or other substances. The invention also relates to the preparation of a blood sample to be tested. 2. Related Art In the field of medicine, a blood sample may be taken for a variety of purposes, such as for analysis of blood serum components, and for testing the blood for a variety of substances. Typically, blood samples are obtained from the fingers of a patient. In such instances, the finger is generally pressed on a special sample test device to obtain a blood sample. Recently, blood sample test devices have been developed to permit the taking of blood samples by means of a relatively small incision in a patient's skin. In particular, blood sample test devices have been developed for testing blood samples for the presence of antibodies, or other substances. One such device is shown in U.S. Pat. No. 4,889
